So get ready to see incredible stories of kids who are simply amazing. But let's be honest -- a lot of kids are fairly special. They're quite cool, too. So we gathered a dozen (or so) people to name the best things about kids. Their answers might surprise you. It's like the six degrees of separation version of this -- we started at Charizard as the source of news, and ended up with a bunch of kids. Here's what they had to say...1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to golf training devices and, more particularly, to such devices adapted to train a golfer for accurate ball striking. 2. Description of the Background Art Many devices have been proposed in the prior art for training a golfer to properly position his or her body and club in striking a golf ball. U.S. Pat. No. 6,968,632 to Pichaitis describes an instructional device wherein golfers putter against a wall to test their ball striking skills. The device includes a floor mat that contacts the wall, and pads that allow the golfer to remain stationary while the ball contacts the wall. U.S. Pat. No. 4,253,790 to Fenton et al. describes a golf stroke training device that utilizes a panel that is selectively movable along a rail, and a golf ball that is supported on a rod attached to the panel. U.S. Pat. No. 2,977,865 to MacMahon describes a golf training device that utilizes a mat with the ball attached to a golf club shaft. The mat is moved so that the club strikes the ball. U.S. Pat. No. 4,468,958 to Best describes a club holder and golfer guide. The holder rests on the ground in front of a golf tee and is provided with a plurality of notches for positioning golf clubs, and a ball for hitting against the

The control device includes a functional circuit element for processing electrical signals, and an electronic switch, which is coupled to the functional circuit element, to control the functional circuit element. It is well known in the art to provide an electronic braking system on a motor vehicle. An electronic braking system includes a microprocessor, which controls the application of brake fluid to the wheel brakes of the vehicle. U.S. Pat. No. 5,046,656 to Denis et al. discloses a microprocessor-controlled electronic brake system with a vehicle master controller. The master controller processes signals from a plurality of wheel sensors and vehicle sensors, and controls the operation of a memory unit. The system controls the braking of the vehicle to achieve a smooth vehicle deceleration and a low degree of wheel slip. The system may include an electronic brake controller, which includes a central processing unit (CPU) coupled to a random access memory (RAM). The CPU controls brake fluid flow valves, which modulate brake fluid flow in response to signals from the wheel sensors and vehicle sensors. The above brake system provides a sophisticated brake pressure control. In U.S. Pat. No. 5,046,656, the memory unit stores a microcontroller program. The microcontroller program includes a series of instructions that are used to determine the braking system parameters that are to be processed, such as the vehicle's speed, the wheel velocity, and the brake pressure to be applied. U.S. Pat. No. 5,146,095 to Visser et al. discloses a microprocessor-controlled braking system, which includes a memory unit that stores a microprocessor program. The program includes a series of instructions that are used to determine the desired braking pressure and the regulation rate of the brake pressure at which the wheel brakes will be actuated. The desired brake pressure is determined by comparing the vehicle speed and a parameter representing the displacement of the accelerator pedal with a reference value. The memory unit also stores data representing the operation of the vehicle, such Encysted eggs of this fish were also pathogenic to mice. It is the first time that hypophysiotrophic gland from this fish was examined. During the development of ovotestis, the gland keep its secretory activity. Adult ovotestes removed from females after the final ovulation showed structure of mature oocyte of "Molina" type located in a poorly-defined cavity, surrounded by several organized follicles. Vesicles were reduced in volume and their parenchymal parenchyma was less electron lucent than that surrounding oocyte.
